Technology in educational settings is no longer an optional splurge. Interactive classroom displays, campus-wide AV systems and digital communication tools have become central to effective teaching, student engagement and school operations.

But school technology has to work consistently, integrate smoothly and support staff to do their jobs well. Poorly implemented systems can quickly become disruptive: downtime interrupts lessons, unreliable equipment frustrates educators, and weak installations lead to avoidable repair costs.

Schools need dependable, long-term technology that protects budgets and learning time.

Crusader AV has been delivering that kind of support for more than 30 years, building a reputation as one of the UK's leading specialists in education-focused IT and audio-visual solutions.

Family-run for three decades

As a family-run UK business, Crusader AV combines technical expertise with a practical understanding of how schools operate. Its projects range from individual classroom upgrades to large-scale campus installations across Multi-Academy Trusts.

Rather than applying a one-size-fits-all approach, Crusader AV works closely with schools to understand how technology will be used day to day by teachers, students, IT teams and estates staff. The result is systems that are capable, intuitive, reliable and sustainable.

End-to-end delivery, full accountability

One of Crusader AV's defining strengths is its fully in-house delivery model. The company manages the full project lifecycle, from consultation and system design through to installation, commissioning, network integration and ongoing support.

For school business managers and IT leaders, this means greater consistency, faster problem solving and clearer accountability. Crusader AV also manufactures and supplies many of its own installation components, including brackets, trolleys and cabling, helping reduce dependency on third-party lead times while maintaining competitive pricing and high installation standards.

Technology made for education

Crusader AV works with primary schools, secondary schools, sixth forms, colleges and universities, delivering solutions tailored to different learning environments.

- Interactive panels and classroom displays
- Projectors and projection systems
- LED video walls
- Hall audio and projection systems
- Digital signage platforms
- Mass communication systems

Each installation is designed to integrate with existing IT infrastructure and remain straightforward for teaching staff to operate without extensive technical support.

Connected learning environments

Beyond core AV systems, Crusader AV also provides the wider technology ecosystem that supports modern classrooms and learning spaces, including collaborative furniture, ergonomic equipment, visualisers, desktop monitors, mounts, mobile trolleys, headphones, keyboards, peripherals, lockable phone pouches and storage solutions.

This broad product range allows schools to source multiple connected solutions through a single trusted supplier, simplifying procurement and supporting compatibility across the learning environment.

Supporting inclusive learning

Schools increasingly need systems that support inclusivity, accessibility and hybrid learning while helping teachers keep students engaged. Crusader AV has responded with specialist solutions such as sensory room installations, designed to create supportive environments for pupils with additional needs.

A long-term EdTech partner

As edtech becomes more central to teaching, communication and campus operations, schools need more than equipment suppliers. They need experience, reliability and ownership of the outcome from start to finish. Over the past 30 years, Crusader AV has built its reputation on exactly that principle.
